This matter is before the Court on Defendants' motion for summary judgment. [Doc. 21.] Pursuant to the provisions of Title 28, United States Code, Section 636(b)(1)(B), and Local Rule 73.02(B)(2)(d), D.S.C., this magistrate judge is authorized to review all pretrial matters in cases filed under Title 42, United States Code, Section 1983, and to submit findings and recommendations to the District Court.

Plaintiff, proceeding pro se, brings this action against Sheriff Tony Davis ("Davis") and Captain Sharon Middleton ("Middleton"; collectively, "Defendants"). [Doc. 1.] Defendants filed their motion for summary judgment on April 20, 2012. [Doc. 21.] By Order filed April 23, 2012, pursuant to Roseboro v. Garrison, 528 F.2d 309 (4th Cir. 1975), Plaintiff was advised of the dismissal/summary judgment procedure and the possible consequences if he failed to adequately respond to the motion. [Doc. 22.] Plaintiff filed a response on April 27, 2012 [Doc. 24], and Defendants filed a reply on May 4, 2012 [Doc. 26]. Accordingly, the motion is now ripe for review.

BACKGROUND

Plaintiff, who was incarcerated in the Greenwood County Detention Center (“GCDC”) at the time he filed his Complaint,¹ alleges that, on November 30, 2011, he was told Middleton had opened Plaintiff’s legal mail.² [Doc. 1 at 3.] Plaintiff seeks $150,000 in damages and to have his pending criminal case dismissed. [Id. at 4.] He also asks that Defendants pay all Plaintiff’s legal fees. [Id.]

APPLICABLE LAW

Liberal Construction of Pro Se Complaint

Plaintiff brought this action pro se, which requires the Court to liberally construe his pleadings. Estelle v. Gamble, 429 U.S. 97, 106 (1976); Haines v. Kerner, 404 U.S. 519, 520 (1972); Loe v. Armistead, 582 F.2d 1291, 1295 (4th Cir. 1978); Gordon v. Leeke, 574 F.2d 1147, 1151 (4th Cir. 1978). Pro se pleadings are held to a less stringent standard than those drafted by attorneys. Haines, 404 U.S. at 520. Even under this less stringent standard, however, the pro se complaint is still subject to summary dismissal. Id. at 520–21. The mandated liberal construction means only that if the court can reasonably read the pleadings to state a valid claim on which the petitioner could prevail, it should do so. Barnett v. Hargett, 174 F.3d 1128, 1133 (10th Cir. 1999). A court may not construct the plaintiff’s legal arguments for him. Small v. Endicott, 998 F.2d 411, 417–18 (7th Cir.

¹Plaintiff is now incarcerated in the Kirkland Reception and Evaluation Center. [See Doc. 27 (notice of change of address).]

²The Court notes Plaintiff filed a similar case, 8:11-cv-01311-DCN-JDA, alleging staff at GCDC had opened Plaintiff’s legal mail before he received it on May 5, 2011 and May 20, 2011. Presumably, the present case involves a different instance when Plaintiff’s legal mail was opened.

1993). Nor should a court “conjure up questions never squarely presented.” Beaudett v. City of Hampton, 775 F.2d 1274, 1278 (4th Cir. 1985).

Requirements for a Cause of Action Under § 1983

Section 1983 provides a private cause of action for plaintiffs alleging constitutional violations by persons acting under color of state law. Section 1983 provides, in relevant part,

[e]very person who, under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage, of any State . . . subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen of the United States or any person within the jurisdiction thereof to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws, shall be liable to the party injured in an action at law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redress

42 U.S.C. § 1983. To establish a claim under § 1983, a plaintiff must prove two elements: (1) that the defendant “deprived [him] of a right secured by the Constitution and laws of the United States” and (2) that the defendant “deprived [him] of this constitutional right under color of [State] statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage.” Mentavlos v. Anderson, 249 F.3d 301, 310 (4th Cir. 2001) (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

The under-color-of-state-law element, which is equivalent to the “state action” requirement under the Fourteenth Amendment, reflects judicial recognition of the fact that most rights secured by the Constitution are protected only against infringement by governments. This fundamental limitation on the scope of constitutional guarantees preserves an area of individual freedom by limiting the reach of federal law and avoids imposing on the State, its agencies or officials, responsibility for conduct for which they cannot fairly be blamed.

Id. at 310 (quoting Dowe v. Total Action Against Poverty in Roanoke Valley, 145 F.3d 653, 658 (4th Cir. 1998)) (internal citations and quotation marks omitted). Nevertheless, “the deed of an ostensibly private organization or individual” may at times be treated “as if a State has caused it to be performed.” Brentwood Acad. v. Tenn. Secondary Sch. Athletic Ass’n, 531 U.S. 288, 295 (2001). Specifically, “state action may be found if, though only if, there is such a ‘close nexus between the State and the challenged action’ that seemingly private behavior ‘may be fairly treated as that of the State itself.’” Id. (quoting Jackson v. Metro. Edison Co., 419 U.S. 345, 351 (1974)). State action requires both an alleged constitutional deprivation “caused by the exercise of some right or privilege created by the State or by a rule of conduct imposed by the State or by a person for whom the State is responsible,” and that “the party charged with the deprivation must be a person who may fairly be said to be a state actor.” Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co., 457 U.S. 922, 937 (1982). A determination of whether a private party’s allegedly unconstitutional conduct is fairly attributable to the State requires the court to “begin[] by identifying ‘the specific conduct of which the plaintiff complains.’” Am. Mfrs. Mut. Ins. Co. v. Sullivan, 526 U.S. 40, 51 (quoting Blum v. Yaretsky, 457 U.S. 991, 1004 (1982)).

Summary Judgment Standard

Rule 56 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure states, as to a party who has moved for summary judgment:

The court shall grant summary judgment if the movant shows that there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.

Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a). A fact is “material” if proof of its existence or non-existence would affect disposition of the case under applicable law. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248 (1986). An issue of material fact is “genuine” if the evidence offered is such that a reasonable jury might return a verdict for the non-movant. Id. at 257. When determining whether a genuine issue has been raised, the court must construe all inferences and ambiguities against the movant and in favor of the non-moving party.

United States v. Diebold, Inc., 369 U.S. 654, 655 (1962).

The party seeking summary judgment shoulders the initial burden of demonstrating to the court that there is no genuine issue of material fact. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323 (1986). Once the movant has made this threshold demonstration, the non-moving party, to survive the motion for summary judgment, may not rest on the allegations averred in his pleadings. Id. at 324. Rather, the non-moving party must demonstrate specific, material facts exist that give rise to a genuine issue. Id. Under this standard, the existence of a mere scintilla of evidence in support of the non-movant's position is insufficient to withstand the summary judgment motion. Anderson, 477 U.S. at 252. Likewise, conclusory allegations or denials, without more, are insufficient to preclude granting the summary judgment motion. Ross v. Commc'ns Satellite Corp., 759 F.2d 355, 365 (4th Cir.1985), overruled on other grounds, 490 U.S. 228 (1989). "Only disputes over facts that might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law will properly preclude the entry of summary judgment. Factual disputes that are irrelevant or unnecessary will not be counted." Anderson, 477 U.S. at 248. Further, Rule 56 provides in pertinent part:

A party asserting that a fact cannot be or is genuinely disputed must support the assertion by:

(A) citing to particular parts of materials in the record, including depositions, documents, electronically stored information, affidavits or declarations, stipulations (including those made for purposes of the motion only), admissions, interrogatory answers, or other materials;
or

(B) showing that the materials cited do not establish the absence or presence of a genuine dispute, or that an adverse party cannot produce admissible evidence to support the fact.

Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1). Accordingly, when Rule 56(c) has shifted the burden of proof to the non-movant, he must produce existence of a factual dispute on every element essential to his action that he bears the burden of adducing at a trial on the merits.

DISCUSSION

In their motion, Defendants argue summary judgment should be granted because Plaintiff's allegations do not rise to the level of a constitutional violation; Defendants are entitled to qualified immunity; Defendants cannot be held liable under the doctrine of respondeat superior; Defendants are not liable based on the theory of supervisory liability; and to the extent Plaintiff bases his claim on state law, Plaintiff has no claim under state law. [Doc. 21-1.] The Court agrees summary judgment should be granted.

Liability Under the Doctrine of Respondeat Superior and Based On the Theory of Supervisory Liability

Initially, the Court notes Davis is not mentioned in the text of the Complaint. Because there is no doctrine of respondeat superior in § 1983 claims, Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs. of City of New York, 436 U.S. 658, 691–94 (1978), a defendant is liable in his individual capacity only for his personal wrongdoing or supervisory actions that violated constitutional norms, see Shaw v. Stroud, 13 F.3d 791, 799 (4th Cir. 1994) (setting forth elements necessary to establish supervisory liability under § 1983). A plaintiff must establish three elements to prevail under § 1983 on a theory of supervisory liability:

(1) that the supervisor had actual or constructive knowledge that his subordinate was engaged in conduct that posed “a pervasive and unreasonable risk” of constitutional injury to citizens like the plaintiff; (2) that the supervisor’s response to that knowledge was so inadequate as to show “deliberate indifference to or tacit authorization of the alleged offensive practices[]”; and (3) that there was an “affirmative causal link” between the supervisor’s inaction and the particular constitutional injury suffered by the plaintiff.

Id. (citations omitted).³ Plaintiff has failed to allege facts sufficient to demonstrate any personal or supervisory wrongdoing by Davis and, therefore, Davis is entitled to summary judgment.

Claim Regarding Legal Mail

Generally, a prisoner enjoys a First Amendment right to receive and send mail, but prison officials may adopt regulations that impinge on a prisoner's constitutional rights if those regulations are “reasonably related to legitimate penological interests.” Turner v. Safley, 482 U.S. 78, 89 (1987). Legitimate penological interests include preserving prison security and maintaining order and discipline. Moreover, in noting the delicate nature of prison management, the Supreme Court has “afforded considerable deference to the determinations of prison administrators who, in the interest of security, regulate the relations between prisoners and the outside world.” Thornburgh v. Abbott, 490 U.S. 401, 408 (1989) (citation omitted).

The Fourth Circuit, in Altizer v. Deeds, 191 F.3d 540, 547–48 (4th Cir. 1999), held “the opening and inspecting of an inmate's outgoing mail is reasonably related to legitimate penological interests, and, therefore, constitutional” However, in a footnote, the court noted “[i]nspecting an inmate's legal mail may implicate the inmate's Sixth Amendment right to communicate freely with his attorney in a criminal case.” Id. at 549, n.14 (citing Wolff v. McDonnell, 418 U.S. 539, 575 (1974)). Legal mail may not be opened outside of the presence of the prisoner-addressee. See Wolff, 418 U.S. at 575. However, to state a claim for a constitutional violation, a plaintiff must show actual injury by the opening. Lewis v. Casey, 518 U.S. 343, 352–54 (1996). To show an actual injury, an inmate must “demonstrate that a nonfrivolous legal claim had been frustrated or was being impeded.” Id. at 353. The prisoner must make specific allegations as to the actual injury sustained. See Cochran v. Morris, 73 F.3d 1310, 1317 (4th Cir. 1996) (holding the plaintiff failed to identify any actual injury resulting from official conduct); Strickler v. Waters, 989 F.2d 1375, 1384 (4th Cir. 1993) (holding the plaintiff had a “basic requirement that he show specific harm or prejudice from the allegedly denied access”).

Here, Plaintiff fails to allege specific facts that would tend to show a pending non-frivolous legal case, or any other legal matter, has been adversely affected due to his mail allegedly being opened and/or read⁴ outside his presence. Plaintiff fails to allege how Middleton’s opening and/or reading the mail would have prevented Plaintiff from proceeding

⁴Plaintiff does not allege his mail was read by Middleton or anyone else at GCDC. In fact, he states, “If Captain Middleton or any other staff member read my legal mail or not I do not know and regardless that isn’t the issue here. My lawsuit[] is based on the fact that Captain Middleton opened my legal mail in my absence which is illegal to do and is a violation of my constitutional rights.” [Doc. 24 at 2.]

with his claims. Plaintiff does not allege his access to the courts has been harmed in any way or that his mail was deliberately or negligently stolen, misplaced, or missing.

To the extent Plaintiff alleges claims pursuant to other provisions of the Constitution, such claims likewise do not provide him any relief because his allegations fail to state a claim upon which relief may be granted. Plaintiff does not allege that any confidential correspondence with his attorney was disclosed, causing Plaintiff to be deprived of effective assistance of counsel. Cf. United States v. Stotts, 925 F.2d 83, 86–88 (4th Cir. 1991) (noting the contours of prison inmates' constitutional rights are imprecise, upholding the Bureau of Prisons' regulations regarding opening and reading mail, and noting that North Carolina's different approach to legal mail was not evidence that the Bureau of Prisons' method was unconstitutional). To the extent Plaintiff alleges he was deprived of his property, loss of property caused by negligence of prison officials is not a deprivation within the meaning of the Due Process Clause. Daniels v. Williams, 474 U.S. 327, 331–34 (1986). Moreover, the Fourth Amendment is generally not applicable to searches of prison cells, and prisoners have no legitimate expectation of privacy in their possessions. Hudson v. Palmer, 468 U.S. 517, 525–26 (1984). Even liberally construing the Complaint, Plaintiff's alleged facts do not state cognizable constitutional claims.

Qualified Immunity

Defendants also are entitled to qualified immunity. Qualified immunity protects government officials performing discretionary functions from civil damage suits as long as the conduct in question does not “violate clearly established rights of which a reasonable person would have known.” Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 818 (1982). Thus, qualified immunity is lost if an official violates a constitutional or statutory right of a plaintiff that was clearly established at the time of the alleged violation such that an objectively reasonable official in the official's position would have known of the right. Id. Further, qualified immunity is "an immunity from suit rather than a mere defense to liability." Mitchell v. Forsyth, 472 U.S. 511, 526 (1985).

To determine whether qualified immunity applies, a court must determine "whether the plaintiff has alleged the deprivation of an actual constitutional right at all[] and . . . whether that right was clearly established at the time of the alleged violation." Wilson v. Layne, 526 U.S. 603, 609 (1999) (quoting Conn v. Gabbert, 526 U.S. 286, 290 (1999)). District court and courts of appeals judges are "permitted to exercise their sound discretion in deciding which of the two prongs of the qualified immunity analysis should be addressed first in light of the circumstances in the particular case at hand." Pearson v. Callahan, 555 U.S. 223, 236 (2009). Here, as discussed above, Plaintiff's allegations fail to demonstrate that Defendants violated Plaintiff's constitutional rights. Therefore, the Court finds Defendants are entitled to qualified immunity.

State Law Claims

To the extent Plaintiff attempts to allege a state law claim in addition to his § 1983 claim, such a state law claim could be heard by this Court only through the exercise of supplemental jurisdiction, which allows federal courts to hear and decide state law claims along with federal law claims.⁵ Federal courts are permitted to decline supplemental jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1367(c)(3), however, if "the district court has dismissed

⁵A civil action for Plaintiff's state law claims could be cognizable in this Court under the diversity statute, if that statute's requirements are satisfied. However, this Court does not have diversity jurisdiction in this case because Plaintiff and Defendants are all citizens of the State of South Carolina, which defeats the required complete diversity of parties. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332.

all claims over which it has original jurisdiction." To the extent Plaintiff bases his claim on state law, the Court recommends that the district judge decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction in this case.

CONCLUSION AND RECOMMENDATION

Wherefore, based upon the foregoing, the Court recommends Defendants' motion for summary judgment be GRANTED.

IT IS SO RECOMMENDED.
